

CHAPTER V

CONCLUSION AND SUGGESTION

5.1. Conclusion

The writer employed Sukmadinata's study and methods in the creation of the novel's script (2005). For the preliminary study, product development, final products, and dissemination, the stage receives a satisfactory final report. First, the writer did a field survey using literature surveys, observations, and interviews and prepared a draft product as part of the preliminary study. Second, the author has already conducted limited and extensive field testing as part of the product development process. The writer asked a writer with an English background and an expert like a designer on the cover of a book in a limited field test. Following the correction of several errors based on expert advice or comments, the writer enlisted the help of other professionals, including an English-speaking author, a book editor and visual designers. The author ultimately acquired the perfect screenplay and mid-length design after referencing the script, the content of the story, and the design of the cover and mid-length layout of the book. The writer has an obligation to reveal his or her expertise to the public as a result of scientific research. As a result of the study's diffusion, the author released a novel on Wattpad.

5.2. Suggestion

The writer suggests that readers of this report could make their own novella as one of the sources as the writer prepare the final report on the novella script design. The writer also suggests that readers might improve their abilities, ideas, and skills in order to boost their creativity when making their own items.
