

CHAPTER V

CONCLUSION AND SUGGESTION

5.1 Conclusion

Based on the explanation above, the writer concludes that when we try to make a short story there are some elements that we should know to make our short story better. Short story must be read in one sitting and not more than one - two hours. There are some elements from the theme, figure, plot, background, viewpoint, language style, and mandate that we should see before we make a short story. There is a media or online web that we can use to promote our short story. One of the websites is wattpad. It can be used by anyone easily and freely. Preliminary study, product development, and final product were the three stages in writing a short story entitled "TRAVELOVE" through wattpad. First, literature study and field survey were conducted to make a good short story. After collecting the information in literature study and field survey, the product draft was arranged. Next, the product draft was tested to the limited testing and wider testing. Last, the research was stopped after revising the product draft based on some reviews in limited testing and wider testing and considered it as the final product.

5.2 Suggestion

By this final report, the writer suggest the readers should use wattpad to read a short stories in English, so that the readers and the can practice English skills while reading the interesting short story.
