

CHAPTER V

CONCLUSION AND SUGGESTION

In this chapter, the writer presents the conclusion and suggestion based on the result of the research and development.

5.1. Conclusion

Based on the explanation in the previous chapter, the writer concludes that there are three steps in writing a good video script. The steps were written by Sukmadinata (2019), and the steps followed the stages written by Friedman (2006). The first step is preliminary study. This step follows the stages by Friedman. They are background research and investigation, concept, treatment, and first draft. The second step is model development. This step follows the stages by Friedman and is revision. The writer did limited testing to make the product develop. There were three aspects tasted by three experts in limited testing. The aspects were about the video's script content, grammatical errors, and language of the script. Then, the writer revised the video script. After that, the writer did wider testing. The writer asked for the comments and suggestions from the four experts: the expert for checking the language of the script, the expert for grammatical errors, and two experts for checking the design of the video. The last step is final product testing, connected with the final draft. This is the last stage of research and development modification steps. It consists of pre-testing, revision, and dissemination. Pre-testing is the last revision step from the wider testing, while dissemination is the writer's attempt to promote the product to society. Unfortunately, the writer will not do the pre-testing, revision, and dissemination steps because of a lack of cost, time, skill, and legality.

Each step has certain advantages and disadvantages. The benefits, including the stages, are pertinent, so the writer may simply carry out the planned actions. The procedures were simple to follow because the script's more intricate evolution was understood by the writer when the script was being written. When putting the methods into practice, the writer discovered drawbacks as well. The phase required the writer to go through six stages, which took a lot of time and made it challenging to introduce the concept of a paragraph during script development.

5.2. Suggestion

In this final report, the writer has some suggestions.

1. Before making a video script, the writer suggests paying attention to the important elements in making a script and using subtitles in the video. This is so that the message contained in the video can be conveyed properly.
2. The writer suggests that other researchers can make other video scripts about tourist destinations in areas in South Sumatra so that everyone can find out what destinations are in areas that are rarely visited.
3. The writer hopes that after reading the script made by the writer, it can attract tourists to visit these destinations.
4. The writer hopes that this final report can be useful for readers, researchers, and especially students of the English department at the State Polytechnic of Sriwijaya.