

CHAPTER V

CONCLUSION AND SUGGESTIONS

This chapter presents conclusions and suggestions resulted from the analysis conducted by the writer about translation strategies in the translation of three folktales of South Sumatera.

5.1 Conclusion

According to the data gained from method of research, the writer concludes that there are five translation strategies based on the organization of information in a folktale of South Sumatera. Additional strategy has the highest percentage among the strategy. Omission/deletion strategy has the lowest percentage.

After the writer analyzed folktale of South Sumatera the kinds of classification translation strategy are divided into two parts. They are structural strategy and semantic strategy. In the folktale of South Sumatera, the writer discussed five strategies. They are addition 41%, transposition 27%, descriptive equivalent 20%, omission/deletion 6%, and expansion 6%.

5.2 Suggestion

Everyone who is interested in translation should master translation strategy. Mastering translation strategy will help a writer to translating the ideas from source language to target language. On the other hand, good translation will help readers understand the translated works better. Furthermore, more folktales should be translated in order to introduce tourism sites to local and global world. Finally, this will help conserve Indonesian culture.