

CHAPTER V

CONCLUSION & SUGGESTION

5.1 CONCLUSION

The final product has been done by following the research method developed by Sukmadinata (2015) that consists preliminary study, model development, and product testing and dissemination. In this case, the writer only stops the work until the revision from wider testing and did not do the product testing and dissemination because the lack of time, budget, and aspect of legality.

After designing the short story book entitled “A Cup of Story” through wattpad, which contains 5 main stories that divided into 23 parts, the writer found that in design a short story the author needs to consider about the plot, character, theme, setting, language, and so on. The other aspect that important in designing a short story is the language aspect, it needs to be simple but still pay attention to the choosing of the right words and sentences. While for the cover design, it is important to choosing simple but still interesting design, start from the color, font style, and so on.

The process of designing the short story book was based on the theories and also some experts’ and respondents’ suggestions and comments that related to their knowledge about the product. The writer revised the product based on the experts’ along with respondents’ suggestions, critics, and comments in limited and wider testing that make the short story book becomes a good product and could be published to wattpad.

5.2 SUGGESTION

The writer suggests to the readers of this report to make this as one of the references that they could be used in develop their own research especially about short story in the future. The writer also suggests to the readers of the short stories book could develop their idea, ability, and skill to increase their creativity in making their own product.
