

CHAPTER V

CONCLUSION AND SUGGESTION

5.1 Conclusion

The process of making calendar used research and development method modified Sukmadinata(2005). Based on the research method, the steps to make a calendar are the preliminary study, model development and final products. The process of designing is preliminary and model development.

In preliminary study, the writer passed three steps, that are literature review, field survey and draft model. For first step or literature review the writer read some journal and read history about Al-Munawar. Second step or field survey the writer three methods including interview, observation and documentation. The writer interview who knows about Al-Munawar Village, observed the situation to get the data about al-munawar village. Third step or draft model the writer start to designing mode draft of al-munawar village.

In model development step, after designing mode draft of al-munawar village, the writer asked some opinion from five expert to make the content of calendar complete, interesting and the calendar can be published. As opinion from expert writer added date of national holiday and change the grammatical error in the script.

Therefore designing a calendar took several steps and involved experts in Al- Munawar Village.

5.2 Suggestion

Based on the findings, the writer wants to give some suggestions, they are: First, the next researcher should complete the information in this calendar because this calendar is not perfect. Second, this calendar should be upgraded in order to be more creative in design and better techniques in taking pictures.
