

CHAPTER V – CONCLUSION AND SUGGESTION

5.1 Conclusion

The short story collection book entitled “Blue Dress” can be used as a medium to introduce hospitality in hotel. After writing the short stories it is found that many expressions or dialogue related to hospitality such as “then I was greeted by the door opened by the doorman and get a warm smile from the bellboy that already standby near the front office desk”. In writing the short stories the writer used Research and Development (R&D) method. There are three steps: preliminary study, model development, and final product testing, but in this research the writer modified again the method of last step in R&D method modified by sukmadinata from final product testing and dissemination to final product only, because of the lack of fund, legality, time and skill. For developing the model draft the writer requested some comments and suggestions from the experts to improve the short stories. Finally the writer made the final product short story collection book to be one of printed media that can be used to introduce hospitality in hotel.

5.2 Suggestion

The writer expects the future researchers to make more stories about hospitality and explore another objects or department in hotel as a background setting in the content of the short story. So that common people know more and familiar about hospitality especially in hotel. The writer also expects the future researchers to use the dissemination step in order to make products better.
